

SCIRE

AEROFLUX

SETUP

- Using a phillips screwdriver, Unscrew the compartment on the base of the device, and insert a 9v battery. A good quality high capacity (over 600mah) battery is recommended.
- Push the battery cap lead back into the compartment (there is a hole at the back of the compartment for additional wire space)
- Screw the compartment closed, and you are good to go!

OPERATION

- Place the AeroFlux on a stable surface then turn it on
- A system check will be conducted, when the light is green, the AeroFlux is monitoring
- Amber alerts do not provide an audio alarm, as the events they are linked to can be subtle, so the intention is that the device doesn't interfere with any audio recording you might be doing and ruin any evidence.
- Red alerts provide three audio tones and flash three times before staying lit for a few seconds

ADVANCED

- "Green Mode" shows that the device is working, and actively monitoring the air pressure, it takes 5 readings every second, and compares against previous readings to determine a pattern of fluctuation.
- "Amber Alert" is linked to occurrences where the pressure has started to fluctuate to a pattern which predominately matched a large number of recorded events which could be classed as minor. i.e. small unexplained noises, small EMF spikes, slight changes in temperature.
- "Red Alert" is linked to a pattern which matched more pronounced recorded events, i.e. Loud noises, visual anomalies, Strong EMF spikes, REM Pod triggers.

BACKGROUND

This is an exciting device, as it is the result of a study started in 2014 into the environmental conductions present during paranormal events. Data loggers were used to record many environmental variables, each and every second. Then when an event was witnessed, the conditions at the time were linked to it.

Over the course of hundreds of recorded paranormal events certain patterns were observed. One of these was related to Air pressure, which routinely shows sign of fluctuation both just before and during other paranormal events occurring. For the past two years, this specific environmental variable has been included in investigation techniques and the exact periods and amount of fluctuation has been determined by experimentation.

PLEASE NOTE

This device is part of the continued investigation into the paranormal and is an effort to share the findings of this study with other field researchers.

The alerts are triggered by conditions which have been present during other recorded paranormal events, but are not guarantees that other events will occur! The purpose is to provide an early warning to investigators to pay close attention to what else might be going on

COLLABORATION

The supernatural is a huge subject to research, so I believe we stand the best chance to make progress by using the strengths of the paranormal community.

I am very interested in investigators experiences using the AeroFlux, and how effective it has been in alerting to or predicting other paranormal events.

I will send you a separate link to be able to provide feedback on your experiences if you so choose, and review what other people have reported.
